ABSTRACT

The Students of today are the youth of tomorrow and future citizens of the country. In India people belong to different religious, speak different living style and need for secularism and National Integration. In this context education can play a dominant role. After Independence it was quite natural that an increased attention should have been paid to the development of a national system of education in India. In Tamilnadu 1997 Government has established one higher secondary school in each district on an experimental basis since then the government has permitted schools far and wide. Admissions are open only a few students who pass STD X. Young children respond with equal intensity to a trivial event and to a serious situation. Emotions appear frequently. Children splay their emotions frequently. Emotions are transition. Young children are rapidly shifted from laughter to tears. From anger to smiles. To find out the level of Emotional Maturity of the higher secondary students. To find out if there is any significant difference between the male and female students in respect of their Emotional Maturity. There is significant differences between the rural and urban male and female student in respect of their Emotional maturity. The study is limited to Tiruppur District and limited to +1 and + 2 students only. The study was carried out on a sample of 300 higher secondary students in Tiruppur District, Tamilnadu
